

UNDERSTANDING

a

:DEAF:

WORLD

Hi! you are about to explore a world from a deaf / hearing impaired perspective.

This Zine covers a range of points about deafness, what it really means, what others should consider and coping strategies.

NORMAL HEARING

Most people are born with normal hearing - at an early age you quickly gather social development at a natural pace which helps you interact and socialise with the world around you.

Deafness: Partially or completely lacking in the sense of hearing

1) Types of hearing losses

• Pre-lingual hearing loss: Born deaf

• Post-lingual hearing loss : Deafness which is developed

Basically means you can be born deaf or you can develop it later in life.

Hearing aid

an electro acoustic device that is designed to amplify sound

Cochlear implant
a surgically implanted device that provides a sense of sound.

2) Levels of hearing losses

MILD HEARING LOSS

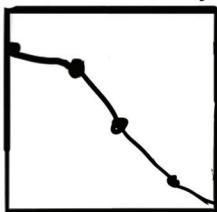

- May cause you to lose 25-50% of speech signal.
- People from the distance can be harder to hear, weak voices can be difficult to pick up on

Moderate HEARING LOSS

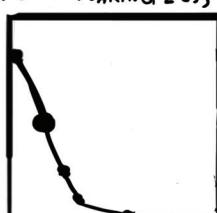

- You may miss 50/75% of the speech signal.
- Normal conversations can be hard to hear especially if distance + visual cues change

Severe HEARING LOSS

- It is difficult hearing in all situations
- You may lose 100% of the speech signal
- (Normal conversations difficult except under ideal circumstances i.e. - face to face, quiet spaces)

Profound HEARING LOSS

- Is the most extreme hearing loss.
- You may not hear any speech at all. You are forced to rely on visual cues constantly

3)- Challenges a deaf person will face

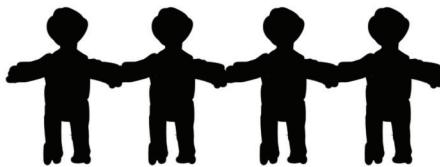

Naturally a hearing person can assume that someone deaf simply just cannot hear as well. This is a misconception

Being deaf means you can't hear as well as others, though it ALSO brings a range of its own challenges with it as well.

This is why hearing loss is seen as a "HIDDEN disability".
here highlights a few points on what a deaf person can experience on a daily basis.

1)

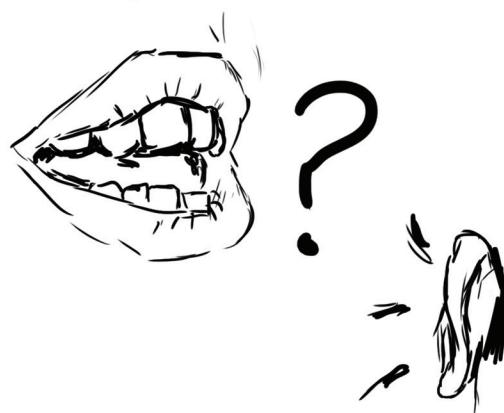

Social isolation/exclusion

Because of someone being deaf - Daily you can feel Marginalised and excluded from the hearing society. This can also affect the individual's impact on their mental health + self-esteem

2)

Inability to grasp words

Being deaf you need to focus twice as hard to hear the other person. It becomes even more a challenge in noiser environments (ie- pubs, bars, outside in the city) where you have to focus even more so in social situations.

3)

Feeling ignored

In addition with being deaf not only is your hearing is affected, your speaking ability too has an impact. Being deaf you may easily get in a habit of speaking quietly or not using your diaphragm to project your words out.

As a result of this, the person who is deaf can hear he/she's own words though the other person might not. Although it might not be intentional it can give the impression that he/she is being ignored.

4) How a deaf person can view the deaf community

For some, they don't want to be labelled as deaf — they want to exist in the hearing world and see themselves as capable as anybody else. It can be seen/felt as a weakness for the individual to be seen as deaf and a open door for abuse and discrimination. So they choose to reject it.

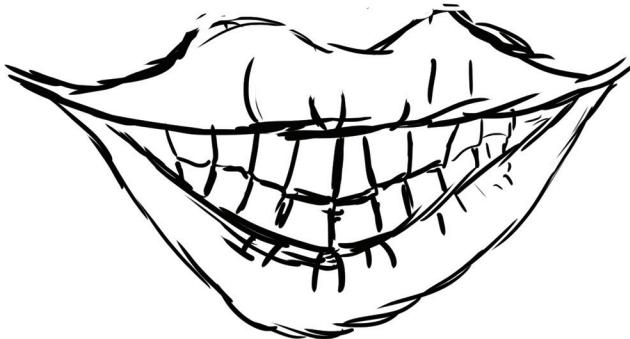

For others, they embrace the meaning of being deaf and the deaf community. If the hearing world will not find a place for us, then we will find and create our own with each other. To reclaim the word deaf and to say that we are "deaf and proud" as some put it.

5) Techniques a deaf person uses to communicate

Being deaf you have to look for visual cues to find out what the other person is saying. Here are some techniques that a deaf person can use to help.

1) Lip Reading

Lip reading is a technique used of understanding speech by visually interpreting the movement of the lips, face and tongue.

2) Sign language

(a)

(C)

(Y)

Sign language is a language which uses visually transmitted sign patterns to convey meaning

6 What not to say and why

1) Saying "it doesn't matter"

YES IT DOES! Talking to a deaf person, you might think you're making it easier by saying this after the third, forth or tenth time he/she has asked you to repeat what you just said. Ultimately the deaf person is trying to grasp every word you've just said. So to say it "doesn't matter" is seen as a REALLY ignorant and rude thing to say.

3 Coping Strategies

Here is a few tips to try out when you're feeling down or trying to cope with the hearing world and for improving yourself

1) Singing

I have found that Singing gave me the best speech therapy that I could ever do. It reminds you to use your all your lungs, breath and diaphragm to project your voice out.

Additional benefits include confidence in proving, self-esteem + You feel great!

2 Sport

Taking up a sport was another hugely important aspect for my life. Do you feel INCREDIBLY FRUSTRATED THAT NO ONE UNDERSTANDS WHAT IT'S LIKE & FEELS LIVING WITH A DEAFNESS + IT'S CHALLENGES 24/7? Clear out your feelings by doing a sport like boxing - You learn discipline, strengthen yourself + Confidence. Anger is a strong emotion - You must learn where to use it appropriately, otherwise it is useless.

3) YOUR SELF

YES, YOU! Ultimately it's you who decides how you want life to be. NO-ONE will be there to help pick you up. So, to learn how to stand on your two feet and to appreciate who you are is a way forward. If you don't feel good about yourself - no-one else will feel good for you. At least appreciate the person you are. ❤️

This is the end of the zine hope you found in insightful

-feel free to pass on, photocopy +
Share.

Thanks to my family + friends, who remind me that I'm just as capable of achieving goals as any body else.

